	Secondary Education in Kenya is not free. Most of its rural population lives by subsistence farming, which can barely provide enough food for their families. Our mission is to provide scholarships for students from Western Kenya based upon financial need and academic potential. You can help Kenyan youth build a better tomorrow for themselves and for their communities. Kenya Education Endowment Fund opening doors to the future www.kenyaeducation.org

Inside of each card

A gift has been made in your name to the Student Support Fund of the Kenya Education Endowment Fund.

The majority of children in Western Kenya cannot afford to attend fee-based high schools. This gift will assist a student to cover expenses related to fees, textbooks, uniforms and school supplies.

In 2011 Abbas, Meshack and Amos received support from the KEEF Student Support Fund.

Student Support — any amount

A gift of a bicycle has been made in your name to a needy day school student sponsored by the Kenya Education Endowment Fund.

A bicycle turned Kevin's long walk to school into a short ride.

Most of Kenya's rural population lives by subsistence farming and cannot afford fee-based secondary school. If they manage the fees, students often have long distances to walk to school. A bicycle can save hours in a day, carry passengers, help with the heavy loads, such as water and wood collection - chores which are often given to the older children.

Gift of a bicycle — $100

Solar light is a priceless gift for those who live without electricity.

A gift of a solar lamp has been made in your name to a student supported by the Kenya Education Endowment Fund.

Fuel-based lamps, such as kerosene, are costly, inefficient and provide poor lighting. The smoke they emit causes respiratory and eye problems. The flames from kerosene lamps are responsible for thousands of severe burns among children every year, along with numerous house fires.

Solar is a comparatively low-cost alternative, especially for families whose poverty puts grid-based electricity out of reach. Solar portable lights emit no fumes and provide better illumination for studying. The major obstacle is the relatively high upfront cost of solar lights. Many families can afford to spend 20 to 50 shillings a day on kerosene, but are struggling to find 2000 shillings for a solar lamp.

Gift of a solar lamp — $25

Mail order form: Please enclose names & addresses of recipients if you would like Maureen to mail the gift cards.
